Under the Wires; New South Wales 45 & 46 Class Electrics: A photographic profile. Edited by Graeme Pantlin & John Sargent

Could be sub-titled 'coal haulers of the forties'; this spectacular new book from Train Hobby publications features the 45-46 class in all its glory. At one time the most powerful locomotive working in Australia, this 56 page book is a very handsome edition to the rail enthusiast collection.

Ghost Railways of Australia

By Robin Bromby

232 pp. Includes index.

This is a very lavish production and a comprehensive look at the history of the railways as a spent force; comprising some rare photographs and potted histories of interesting facts and personalities of the railway workers that made the Australian rail network what it has become. As the title suggests – the author concentrates on the dissipated lines such as the Melbourne Inner Circle. The author calls such lines – vanished places. Expertly researched; but really a potted history and should be considered in the Xmas present category, for a new chum, rather than the hardcore train fan.

GREAT XMAS GIFT IDEAS—BOARD GAMES

Ticket to Ride—Marklin Board Games

From the craggy hillsides of Edinburgh to the sunlit docks of Constantinople, from the dusty alleys of Pamplona to a windswept station in Berlin, the Ticket to Ride board game from Marklin takes you on a train adventure through the great cities of the turn-of-the-century Europe. Risk a trip through the dark tunnels of Switzerland; venture aboard a ferry on the Black Sea; erect lavish train stations in the great capitals of the old empires—your next move might just make you Europe's greatest train magnate. This best selling board game series has won 14 international game awards; the Ticket to Ride – Marklin Edition is simple, fun and addictive. Players collect sets of train cards that enable them to claim railway routes and fulfill their all-important Destination Tickets by connecting distant cities [the third edition incorporates a new concept—Passengers that are used to pick up valuable Merchandise along the routes]. Made in Germany in partnership with Marklin—the world leader in model railroading!
